THE CHAPMAN EXPEDITION. Arrival of Engineers James and of the Colorado River—Through the Cocopah Indian Country—Lake Maquata—The Overflowed Lands and Desert - Cocopah and Const Hanges - Bluffing the Indians - A Thirty-Foot Tidal Wave - Etc.

There has been much private and public speculation upon the rumored project of overflowing the lands near the mouth of the Colorado river. It has been supposed that W. S. Chapman, of San Francisco, had some gigantic scheme on hand by which the climate of the lower country, and especially near the mouth of the Colorado river, was to be changed, and a great inland sea, to be made out of the desert, was to be accomplished. Mr. Chapman has undoubtedly some scheme on foot, but what it is has not yet come to the surface. That it is in regard to overflowed lands, we have no doubt. From the San Diego Union of August 26th.

THE EXPEDITION. I. E. James, engineer in charge, was sent from San Francisco, by Mr. Chap-man, to make certain surveys and obser-vations on lands bordering on the Col-orado and New rivers. He organized his orado and New rivers. He organized his party in San Diego, taking Samuel Purdy, Jr., as assistant. Their outfit, when they started to penetrate these localities, about which so little is known by the outside world, consisted of eight men, a wagon and a pack-horse. From where they branched off the Fort Yuma road, they proceeded over a desert country for about 25 miles, when they struck the New river country, which is said to contain a large amount of fertile land, made so by the freshets that overflow that section. It is 50 miles from there to the mouth of Hardy a Colorado (river), and 23½ miles from there to the mouth of the Colorado river at Montague of the Colorado river at Montague Island.

The party struck off to the right of Signal Mountain, which is near the boundary line between the United States and Lower California, and at the head of the Cocopah range.

LAKE MAQUATA. This fine sheet of water is about thirty-five miles in length, and averages ten miles in breadth. Its water is described miles in breadth. Its water is described as being intensely impregnated with salt. Its name signifies hair, so called by the Cocopah Indians, on account of the peculiar sea-weed which grows in it. The shares are covered with this weed, which has been washed ashore, and which very much resembles hair. The northern end of the lake is at the base of the Signal Mountain, and it extends southward to within sixteen miles of the lower end of the Cocopah range of mountains. In fact the lake lies, as it were, in a broad valley between the Cocopah and Coast Ranges. It is only fourteen miles from Indian Wells, on the Yuma road, to the north end of the lake. This large body of water seems to be fed mainly by the tides which flow from the Colorado river, through Hardy's Colorado and Pasqual slough. It is possible that the very heavy through Hardy's Colorado and Pasqual slough. It is possible that the very heavy tide—one of the "bores," spoken of hereafter—may flow over the land into the lake. The ground on the lake, at the entrance of Pascal slough, is but ten feet above the mean tide, while further up it is but two feet higher. The whole country from New River station, on the Yuma road, to the Gulf of California, is subject to overflow from the river, or high tides from the Gulf.

from the Gulf.

Mount Purdy, an extinct volcano, is at the summit of the divide between the desert country to the north and the fertile country to the south.

HOT WEATHER. While the party was in this desert country the beat was almost intolerable. The thermometer indicated regularly at three o'clock every afternoon 114 in the shade. It would usually drop to 70 or 80° at night, but once more before the 80° at night, but once more before the party reached Mount Purdy, the mercury found 110° in the night. After passing this mountain the climate was found to fine, on account of the breeze from the Gulf.

THE COCOPAH INDIANS.

This tribe of Indians inhabit the mesa or table-land back near the Cocopah range, and are opposed to invasions of all characters. When the exploring party first entered their dominion they met at Point of Rocks, on Hardy's Colorado, a delegation of Indians who wanted to know their business. It was explained to them that the party wished to make a survey and map of the country. As the Indians explain all their conversation by making marks in the sand with sticks, the map business was readily understood. They did not like to have the party go through their country, and de-THE COCOPAR INDIANS. party go through their country, and de-clared positively that so large a number of strangers should not. In San Fran-cisco several old Mexicans and others who had some knowledge of the Cocopahs, told Mr. James that no one had as yet been able to reportate that country, and been able to penetrate that country, and that those who had made the attempt had lost their lives. A compromise of doubt-ful meaning was finally made by which Messrs. James and Purdy were to be al-Mesars, James and Purdy were to be all-lowed to proceed with one man and a pack-horse. Nothing dannted, they complied with the demand and set out on their journey. They were followed by the Indians constantly, and occasionally the latter would come into camp.

INDIAN ATTIRE. The Indians are tall and fine looking in their Garden-of-Eden attire. A goodin their Garden-of-Eden attire. A good-looking squaw is rather the exception than the rule. They wear a sort of shirt, made of bark, that comes down a little above the knees. The members of fami-lies are very affectionate toward each other. The men wear their hair long, parted in the middle and cut short in front, over the eyes.

SHORT RATIONS.

During the time the engineers were in the Indian country, their rations consisted of flour, sugar and coffee. They were obliged to subsist for ten days on flour and water, and when their supply gave out, they lived for three days on what is called "pig weed," which they cooked and ate as "greens," and found it to be very nourishing (no joke).

The party camped, with their Indian guide, on the west side of the Colorado river, opposite Montague Island, and directly across from the ship yard of the Colorado Steam Navigation Company, which is on the Sonora side. From this point it is from ten to twelve miles back to the Coast Range of the mountains. All of the land lying between the mouth of the river and Hardy's Coloradotwenty-three and a half miles—is five feet below the high tides mentioned by Lieut. Ives in his survey, and is worthless. NEAR MOUTH OF COLORADO.

On one occasion about fifty Indians came in to see them, and when night came on Mr. James told them, as on all former occasions, that they must get out and stay at a respectful distance. They at first refused to obey, but when a Henry rifle and double-barrel shot-gun, with an array of navy revolvers were shown them they yielded rejuctantly and departed. Aside from this little incident the Indians gave them no trouble. At another time, there being a difficult survey to be made, the engineers left all their traps, including their gans, with a Chief and his band for three days, all being restored to them on their return.

At the mouth of the Colorado rise to the height of thirty feet, and are said to present a sublime spectacle. During the time when there is a freshet in the river, the tide meets the torrent on its way to the sea, and in the struggle between these two mighty forces for the mastery, the waters pile up like an immense mound. Finally the water from the Galf overtops and then the vast tidal wave marches up river and back inland with a roar that can be heard for five miles. The wave is known by the natives as the "bore." It has carried several boats inland and left them high and dry. Messrs, James and Purdy inform us that they found a mast of a vessel twenty miles inland, which had undoubtedly been deposited where they found it by one of these tidal waves.

As before stated, the land from the mouth of the Colorado up to Hardy's Colorado is worthless, but from there up to and along New river the soil is very fertile, and by irrigation can be be made to yield largely.
